The report of Jas. E. Harman, Redfield Proctor and Franklin Billings, selectmen of Rutland for 1866, showed that the town had furnished a total of 948 men for the service during the war of the rebellion, an excess of two over all calls or demands and an excess of 145 over the entire United States enrollment of men liable to military duty December 31st, 1864; the town voting bounties and paying same with other expenses of recruiting to the amount of $217,676.64, or over one-twelfth of the appraised value of all the property in the town.

Every claim for bounty made since has been promptly met, although all legal obligation had long since outlawed.
